MILITARY JOURNAL
DURING THE
REVOLUTIONARY WAR,
From 1775 to 1783,

Speaking of a certain party on our side, he says, 'this party plunders without mercy, and murders the defenceless people just as private pique, prejudice or personal resentments dictate. Principles of humanity as well as policy require that proper measures should be immediately taken to restrain these abuses, heal differences and unite the people as much as much as possible. No violence should be offered to any of the inhabitants unless found in arms. The idea of exterminating the tories is no less barbarous than impolitic. Such is the infernal spirit of revenge and bitterness which has caused mutual destruction and wretchedness among the people. But however atrocious may have been the conduct of some unauthorized partizans on the part of the Americans, the following instance of inhumanity, in the sacrifice of one of the victims of their malicious resentment, is sufficient to stigmatize the British character with eternal infamy. Lord Rawdon and Lieutenant Colonel Balfour, have perpetrated an act which in all its distressing circumstances surpasses in enormity and wickedness, all others which have come to our knowledge, and which has roused the indignant spirit of every true American to a pitch of desperation. 'Colonel Isaac Hayne, during the siege of Charleston, served his country as an officer of militia. After the capitulation no alternative was left, but to abandon his family and property, or to surrender to the conquerors. The small pox was near his plantation, and he had a wife, six small children, and more than one hundred negroes, all liable to the disease. He concluded that instead of waiting to be captured, it would be both more safe and more honorable to go within the British lines, and surrender himself a voluntary prisoner. He therefore repaired to Charleston, and offered to bind himself by the honor of an American officer, to do nothing prejudicial to the British interest till he should be exchanged. Reports made of his superior abilities and influence, uniformly exerted in the American cause, operated with the conquerors to refuse him a parole, though they were daily accustomed to grant this indulgence to other inhabitants. He was told that he must either become a British subject or close confinement.

To be arrested and detained in the capital, was not to himself an intolerable evil, but to abandon his family both to the ravages of the small pox then raging in their neighborhood, and to the insults and depredations of the royalists, was too much for the tender husband and fond parent. To acknowledge himself the subject of a government which he had from principle renounced, was repugnant to his feelings; but without this, he was cut off from every prospect of a return to his family. In this embarrassing situation he waited on Dr. Ramsay, with a declaration to the following effect. 'If the British would grant me the indulgence which we in the day of our power gave to their adherents, of removing my family and property, I would seek an asylum in the remotest corner of the United States, rather than submit to their government; but as they allow no other alternative than submission or confinement in the capital, at a distance from my wife and family, at a time when they are in the most pressing need of my presence and support, I must for the present yield to the demands of the conquerors. I request you to bear in mind, that previous to my taking this step, I declare that it is contrary to my inclination, and forced on me by hard necessity. I never will bear arms against my country. My new masters can require the service of me, but what is enjoined by the old militia law of the province, which substitutes a fine in lieu of personal service. This I will pay as the price of my protection. If my conduct should be censured by my countrymen, I beg that you would remember this conversation, and bear witness for me, that I do not mean to desert the cause of America.'

In this state of perplexity, Colonel Hayne subscribed a declaration of his allegiance to the king of Great Britain, but not without expressly objecting to the clause which required him with his arms to support the royal government. The commandant of the garrison, Brigadier General Patterson and James Simpson, Esquire, Intendant of the British police, assured him that this would never be required: and added further, that when the regular forces could not defend the country without the aid of its inhabitants, it would be high time for the royal army to quit it. Having submitted to the royal government, he was permitted to return to his family. Notwithstanding what had passed at the time of his submission, he was repeatedly called on, to take arms against his countrymen, and finally threatened with close confinement in case of a further refusal. This he considered as a breach of contract, and it being no longer in the power of the British to give him that protection which was to be the compensation of his allegiance, he viewed himself as released from all engagements to their commanders. The inhabitants of his neighborhood, who had also revolted, petitioned General Pickens to appoint him to the command of their regiment which was done, and the appointment accepted. Hayne fell into their hands. He was carried to the capital, and confined in the provost prison, for having resumed his arms after accepting British protection. At first he was promised a trial, and had counsel prepared to justify his conduct by the laws of nations and usages of war, but this was finally refused, and he was ordered for execution by Lord Rawdon and Lieutenant Colonel Balfour. The royal Lieutenant Governor Bull, and a great number of inhabitants, both royalists and Americans, interceded for his life. The ladies of Charleston generally signed a petition in his behalf, in which was introduced every delicate sentiment that was likely to operate on the gallantry of officers or the humanity of men. His children, accompanied by some near relations, the mother had died of the small pox, were presented on their bended knees as humble suitors for their father's life. Such powerful intercessions were made in his favor, as touched many an unfeeling heart and drew tears from many a hard eye: but Lord Rawdon and Balfour continued firm in their determination.

The colonel was repeatedly visited by his friends, and conversed on various subjects with a becoming fortitude. He particularly lamented that, on principles of retaliation, his execution would probably be an introduction to the shedding of much innocent blood. He requested those in whom the supreme power was vested, to accommodate the mode of his death to his feelings as an officer, but this was refused. On the last evening of his life he told a friend that he was no more alarmed at the thoughts of death, than at any other occurrence which was necessary and unavoidable.

On receiving his summons on the morning of August the 4th, to proceed to the place of execution, he delivered to his eldest son, a youth of about thirteen years of age, several papers relative to his case and said—'Present these papers to Mrs. Edwards, with my request that she shoud forward them to her brother in Congress. You will next repair to the place of execution, receive my body, and see it decently interred among my forefathers.'—They took a final leave. The colonel's arms were pinioned, and a guard placed round his person.

He ascended the cart with a firm step and serene aspect. He inquired of the executioner, who was making an attempt to get up to pull the cap over his eyes, what he wanted. On being informed, the colonel replied—'I will save you the trouble,' and pulled the cap over himself. He was afterwards asked whether he wished to say anything to which he answered—"I will only take leave of my friends and be ready." He then affectionately shook hands with three gentlemen, recommending his children to their care, and gave the signal for the cart to move.

DONE FOR.—A wag a few years since procured some eye wash of a quack oculist in this city to be applied to a glass eye which he wore. The oculist, not being very sharp-sighted, discovered there was some defect in the eye, but thought it no sitting that he warranted a cure or no pay. The wag took the wash and departed: In a week or so after he returned with the empty vial, and apparently in great distress.

'Oh, doctor! doctor!' said he, 'your d—d stuff has wholly destroyed my eye!' at the same time opening the lids of the empty socket with his finger, to the horror of the gaping and staring oculist.

'Is it possible! can it be possible!' exclaimed the eye tinkerer. 'I never knew my medicine to operate so before. Well, my dear sir, I can do nothing less than return you your money.'

'But you must do more sir. What is five dollars to me compared with the loss of an eye!' replied the wag. 'If you will give me two hundred dollars, I will sign a pledge never to expose you—but if you do not, I will prosecute you forthwith, and you are a ruined man.'

The quack forked over a check for the amount and the covey cut stick, perhaps for Texas.—Exchange.

GETTING MARRIED.

It is a singular fact that, ever as the year declines, marriages increase. As the atmosphere cools, the ties of affection, relaxed by the heats of Summer, so far contract that the lovers at their termini are brought together, and a few talismanic touches of a priest are sufficient to form the cord into a slipnoose, and the thing is fixed. October suffices to accomplish the work for the more sensitive. Another class gives in to the influences of November. December drives together the more reluctant, and January breaks down all opposition. There are a few 'sporadic cases,' occurring at different times in the year, but not in sufficient numbers to be taken into account.

To us, this getting married is a very interesting ceremony, as well as a very interesting fact. We love to see the business going on, it is full of its lessons, and tells of prosperity, virtue, enterprise and happiness. There is not a greater proof of the beneficence of American institutions, and of National morality, than the universality of marriage. It is not only an indication of thrift and prudence, but a powerful cause of the exercise of those admirable domestic virtues. So we are always glad to see the marrying season come round. We rejoice to see the young folks entering the matrimonial ark, 'male and female, of all flesh, as God had commanded,' and made happy when the Lord through his ministers 'shuts them in.'—For there are floods and tempests in every life, and the old ark always lands its passengers nearer heaven than any other craft. Sailing under her colors, we have no affection for the old bachelors, 'who don't think there is going to be much of a shower.'

RINORDINE.

One evening as I rambled
Two miles below Pomroy,
I met a farmer's daughter,
All on the mountains high—
I said my pretty fair maiden;
Your beauty shines most clear,
And upon these lonely mountains,
I'm glad to meet you here.

She said, young man be civil,
My company forsake,
For to my great opinion,
I fear you are a rake—
And if my parents should know,
My life they would destroy,
For keeping of your company,
All on the mountains high.

I said my dear, I am no rake,
But brought up in Venus' train,
And looking out for concealments,
All in the judge's name,
Your beauty has ensnared me,
I cannot pass you by,
And with my gun I'll guide you,
All on the mountains high.

This pretty little thing,
She fell into amaze,
With her eyes as bright as amber
Upon me she did gaze,
Her cherry cheeks and ruby lips,
They lost their former dye,
And then she fell into my arms,
All on the mountains high.

I had but kissed her once or twice,
'Till she came too again,
She modestly then asked me,
Pray sir, what is your name?
If you go to yonder forest,
My castle you will find,
Wrote in ancient history,
My name is Rinordine.

I said my pretty fair maiden,
Don't let your parents know,
For if you do, they'll prove my ruin,
And fatal overthrow,
But when you come to look for me,
Perhaps you'll not me find,
But I'll be in my castle,
And call for Rinordine.

CONGRESS.

Congress is working for life, but 'ill will speaks well of nobody.' We find in some remarks of our Editorial brethereh, charging Congress with idleness. We do not visit the the Capitol but from the papers both Houses appear to be busy; to be sure, there has been some rather long speeches, but we should like to know where the remedy lies, it is not to be found in the whole body of Congress. The liberty of speech is our sheetanchre and let the manner or the matter be what it may, it is one of the last provisions of our life-guard to be infringed.

They do plague our friend Hon. J. P. Hale however, when he gets up to enlighten Senators upon the 'Higher Law,' and 'Free Democracy;' but he is so good natured he feels no resentment.

We can hardly say what Congress is doing, they fly so quick from one thing to another, and seem to be settling up the odds and ends of various matters, and finally the Senate has concluded to admit Hon A. Dixon of Kentucky, to a seat amongst them.

In the House Naval and Invalid Pensions, Land sales and locations—suppression of small notes in the District of Columbia, engaged its attention when we last heard from it. We believe however, that the Cuban question stands a good chance to divide the attention of Congress for the remainder of this short session.

HON. WILLIAM R. KING,

The friends of this gentleman will be pleased to learn that he is better. One of the messengers attached to the Senate, called at our residence last Monday, and gave us the cheering information, and that he was preparing to visit Havannah. Many prayers will be breathed to heaven for his safety and happiness: as few men was ever more beloved, or has acted with more propriety or honor, either as a Statesman or a gentleman. In charity he has no equal, in modesty evenness of temper, and elegance of manners he has no superior.

Washington is the last place in the Union for invalids, especially those afflicted with disease of the lungs. Oh! the suffering this amiable man might have avoided had he travelled the same distance South, or even remained at his own beautiful Selma. But we hope it is not too late. May a kind Providence watch over him wherever he goes.

Had Mr. Clay been removed to the South in the first stage of his illness, he might have been alive yet, or at least his sufferings would have been greatly mitigated.

We have known Col. King personally for thirty years, and by reputation thirty-four years, and electioneered for his election as the first Senator sent by Alabama to Congress, after it was organized as a State, to which honorable office he has been elected ever since.

HON. JEREMIAH CLEMENS:

Mr. C. is the colleague of Senator King, and we are pained to hear that he too, is much indisposed.

Speaking of the present Congress, reminds us of the very unpleasant disappointment we met with the first session, in paying our respects to new members—notwithstanding the polite assistance of members themselves, and Doorkeepers, we failed in seeing the one half of them. But we have all their names down, and being now restored to health, shall see them if possible by the 4th of March.

Meantime we should be deficient in that respect due alike to ourself and those members of Congress, who so generously aided us during our recent illness, were we not to acknowledge their kindness.—From delicacy we forbear to mention their names—it is enough that the All-seeing eye is upon them, and will fulfil his promised reward.

Nor can we ever be thankful enough to those ministering angels, some Western ladies, whose Senatorial dignity did not withhold them from our sick bed, and attending to our slightest wants, while the recording Angel * * * But our heart is full. May they for ever be blessed by the kindness of man, and the favor of Heaven.

☞ The Cause.

Some explanation may perhaps be expected for our pecuniary circumstances. Having a pension of $4.80 per annum, and a generous patronage as a publisher, we have already stated that Congress Boarding houses in Washington, were filled with foreign and domestic spies; who, as we believe, are employed and paid by British gold, whose duty in part is evident to watch those opposed to abolition:—this is our opinion, from what we saw—they are mostly servants and foreigners, and bitter against our paper. It was as much as our Sally could do to rescue a packet which one of those ruffians was in the act of putting in the stove.—This was at the National last year, and the same spies of ruffians at other houses destroyed our paper, so that the subscribers did not get any, except what they found at the Capitol.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN,

We find an ably written letter addressed to the Union on the subject of the Cabin and the Beechers, dated Cincinnati December 16, 1852, signed W. The remarks are in the style of a scholar, a man of talents and a sound reasoner. It does not comprise more than a half column, but comprehends much;

"Uncle Tom's Cabin.

'The eccentric Dr. Lyman Beecher and all his visionary family are well known in this neighborhood. They are people of some intellectual capacity, but all fanatical and fond of notoriety. Mrs Harriet Beecher Stowe is the flower of the flock in point of genius, but has more of the otter than the rose in her taste and sympathies.

Like many others, we tried to read her stable fiction, 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' but found it a tissue of false philanthropy and misrepresentation. Her negro characters are extravagant specimens of perfection, far superior to human nature in general, and much above the common standard of 'white folks:' As it is well said in one of your articles, her argument is decidedly in favor of slavery, as the best school for virtue and refinement:

'If Mrs. Stowe had been familiar with the South, she would have known that the best servants on a plantation would be the very last article sold for money, even under the pressure of debt. And yet she forces the master to sell his faithful foreman, and the mistress her favorite housemaid, whilst there were lots of common negroes on the place. In fact, her hard strained romance is inconsistent with the plainest dictates of reason and common sense. If Mrs Stowe would visit the garrets and cellars of London, or the coal mines of anti-slavery England, she would find some millions of miserable creatures who would be thankful for a share of the bread, meat, and clothing of our southern slaves. It is colored misery those busy Pharisees deplore, whilst white men, women, and children may starve and rot in wretchedness without a throb of sympathy from those cold northern hearts.

We account for this colored partiality on three broad principles: Hostility to the South, a morbid appetite for notoriety, and a greediness for gain. Mrs Stowe could write a more truthful story on white slavery, but it would not sell so well: it would not meet with the same fanatical feeling and malicious zeal to give it circulation. Her book was probably written by contract, like Dickens's slanders on our country, or from venomous spleen, like the vulgarities of Madame Trollope. Mrs Stowe professes to be a pious woman, but the cause of religion is not promoted by the perversion of truth, nor by the frivolous repetition of sacred names.

It is well for our country that so large a portion of the people have condemned those wicked agitators, who would sacrifice the hopes of the world to carry out a fanatical or hypocritical idea. W.

Cincinnati, December 16, 1852."

These remarks are unanswerable—no truth is more believed than the affirmative that a planter would almost as soon part with one of his children as his favorite servant, But as the writer very justly says—

"Mrs Stowe could write a more truthful story on white slavery, but it would not sell so well, it would not meet with the same fanatical feeling and malicious zeal to give it circulation."

This gentleman not only shows a deep insight into human nature, but a fearless independence which does honor to the American name.

Mrs Stowe does not believe what she says herself, and may aim to pass it off as a romance, but it is the intention of the work that tells its worth. Any rational individual can see at a glance that the whole is a scheme of direct mischief, fraught with a deadly hatred against all who think different from them. The whole of this sect, of which the Beechers and Rev. Stiles Ely are at the head, and were the refounders of the old Pilgrim Church [or as we call them] the Church & State bigots, whose persecutions are well known subjects of history. The monsters put innocent men, women and children to death, cut out their tongues, cut off their ears, bored their tongues with redshot irons, stripped women naked, and whipped them till the blood streamed down their backs.

This was done by the Church, which church the Beechers, with the assistance of British and American conspirators, is gainst the toleration of religion by our constitution, which is to be effected under the cover of abolition, alias Free Democracy. These Pilgrims, or rather deacons dants, were so enraged at the clause in our constitution allowing every one to worship God agreeably to their own conscience that they laid the plan of reviving the old Church about the commencement of the present century.

We remember them well when thirsting for money, blood and power, they came over in swarms from England, Scotland, Wales, and North of Ireland; some of them were genteel, elegant, and learned clergymen, these went South.* Others were the very lowest of creation, and mingled with their brother conspirators of our own to the States, and established the go ahead gospel spreading business—collecting 'money for the Lord' But our people know all about this, though perhaps they may not know so much of the Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher as we do.

About the year 1824 and '5, we were called on business (with Lafayette) to Boston, where Dr L. Beecher then lived as he does now, and was in the height of his pious hoor, so far as he dare go. He preached mightily to servant girls mostly, scarcely any men went to hear him, and none at all of the first class of society as we were informed. We saw him often at our boarding house in Brattle street. But he gained much ill will by his nocturnal visits to gentlemen's houses—and slipping incendiary papers under their doors, and as we heard after we left Boston, he left that city and founded Lane College, near Cincinnati.

* We were then in Alabama, our planters were shy of them—but they soon converted the ladies.

To an Absent Brother.

Often at the close of day,
To our youthful haunts I stray,
Vainly hoping there to find
Comfort for my lonely mind:

Smoothly still doth glide the brook,
Just as green the maples look,
And as blue appears the sky,
As when here played you and I:

On the bark of the old pine
Still appears your name and mine;
Rudely carved the letters are,
Years ago we placed them there.

Come dear Brother, home again,
Why in distant lands remain?
Happiness from me has flown,
And I weep that I'm alone.

PROSPECTUS FOR "THE GLOBE
THE CONGRESSIONAL NEWSPAPER.

THE APPROACH OF CONGRESS calls for the renewal of my proposals and preparations to spread its debates before the public. The success which has hitherto attended this undertaking it is hoped will continue, and enable me to perpetuate the full history of the proceedings and discussions of the body on which the destiny of the Republic depends.

The adoption of Congress has given the GLOBE an official character as the reporter of all that is said and done in this body. This sanction has been voted at every successive session for many years, and by members of all parties. The press, too, of all parties, has borne testimony to the fidelity with which the duty thus confided has been performed.

The great celerity with which the latter writers for the distant press circulate through the telegraph their hurried accounts and views of the debates of Congress, renders more important than ever the full and exact official reports of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE. The hasty, and in many instances ex parte, relations by telegraph of what occurs in Congress supersede, for the most part, the exact reports taken down by reporters, and which formerly, in a shape more or less abbreviated, went the rounds of the press. Now the telegraph accounts, with all their imperfections and variety of colorings, take the run of the country, and no press but the official of Congress ever publishes the full debate with the proceedings of both Houses unmutilated. Indeed, no newspaper can give them, and have room for advertisements and the miscellaneous matter essential to their existence. While therefore, the telegraph administers to the eager appetite of the public for Congress news, and meets the necessities of the political press, by furnishing a rapidly-written epitome suited to the taste of its patrons, perfect information of what passes in Congress is greatly diminished. The circulation of the official reports has been, to some extent, cut off by the crude and diversified accounts which, flying along the electric wires, satisfies curiosity, and it is almost in vain that truth puts on his boots to follow. Still there are a great many men of leisure and thought who like to see what is actually said and done in Congress, and to judge for themselves, rather than to receive impressions altogether from galvanic batteries. There are others, too, who, for the sake of the future, willingly patronise a work which preserves a full record of the doings of the great moving and controlling power of the Republic.

3,500 royal quarto pages of brevier and nonpareil type, making 4 volumes of near 900 pages each. The reports for the last long session made 3,896 royal quarto pages, and were bound in 4 volumes, averaging 974 royal quarto pages each.

I will publish in the APPENDIX for the next session all laws that may be passed during the session, which has not been done heretofore. Although this will increase in no all degree the expense of the publication, the subscription price will be the same that it has been for several years past.

The DAILY GLOBE will be published during the session on superfine double foyal sheet. It will contain the debates as taken down by the reporters, and as altered by the speakers, whenever they make any alterations; the current news of the day, and miscellaneous matter. The main object for publishing the daily paper is to enable Members to see their remarks in it, and alter them if they shall think proper before they are published in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX.

The CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on a double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the Members, in this first form, are sometimes condensed--the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's Annual Message, the reports of the principal officers of the Government that accompany it, and all speeches of Members of Congress, written out or revised themselves. It is printed in the same form as the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE, and usually makes about the same number of pages during a session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and one of the APPENDIX; but during the remainder of a session there is usually sufficient matter for two or three numbers of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore I calculate that the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX together will make at least 3,500 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. Complete Indexes to both will be furnished at the end of a session.

I will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that I should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

If subscribers shall not be satisfied with the work, the money paid by them for it will be refunded to them whenever they return the numbers which may have been received by them. I will give subscribers the subscription price for any of the previous volumes of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE or the APPENDIX, except for the last session, and will thank any person who will let me have them.

I have a few copies of the back volumes of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for sale at $5 a volume bound, which it is probable will be disposed of soon; and when they are, they will then, no doubt, command at least $10 a volume, as they cannot be reprinted for less than that sum. There are 25 back volumes.

TERMS.

For one copy of the DAILY GLOBE during the session - - - - - - - - $5 00
For one copy of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE during the session - - - - - - - 3 00

The money may be remitted by mail at my risk. Bank notes current where a subscriber resides will be received at par. Subscriptions should reach here by the 13th December, at furthest, to insure all the numbers.

The prices for these papers are so low that I cannot afford to credit them out; therefore no person need order them unless the money accompanies the order.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1853
THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.
THE LEADING LITERARY WEEKLY

Over Thirty-one years have elapsed since the Saturday Evening Post began its weekly round of blended instruction and amusement: and never, in all that period, was its success so marked as at the present moment. Possessing undeniably the largest circulation, by many thousands, of any paper of its class in the Union, its subscribers have the best of reasons for believing that it stands upon a permanent basis, and that they will receive the full value of every dollar intrusted to its publishers. In announcing some of our preparations for the coming year, we may begin by stating our continued connection with Mrs. Southworth, a writer who, in vigor and fertility of genius, is not surpassed by any, male or female, in the Union. Miss Caroline Lee Hentz, a lady whom it would be almost superfluous to praise, in view of the general popularity of such tales as 'The Mob Cap,' 'Eoline,' 'Linda,' 'Rena,' etc also is enrolled among our contributors.

We shall shortly begin the publication of a story entitled

CLARA MORELAND,

By Emerson Bennett, author of 'Viola,' 'Prairie Flower,' 'Bandits of the Osage,' &c. And at the opening of the ensuing year the design commencing the publication of the following Novelet,

MISS THUSA'S SPINNING-WHEEL,

By Mrs. Lee Hentz, of Florida, author of 'Eoline,' 'Linda,' 'Rena,' etc

This novelet we design for a story entitled,

A STRAY PATCH FROM AUNT HANNAH'S QUILT.

By Mrs. Frances D. Gage, of Ohio, widely known as the author of some admirably written and very effective household poems, sketches, etc. After this we expect to be able to commence

THE LOST HEIRESS;
A STORY OF HOWLET HALL.

By Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, author of 'The Curse of Clifton,' 'Virginia and Magdalene,' 'Shannondale,' the Deserted Wife,

In addition to these and other Original tales, involving a large expenditure of money we shall lay before our readers as heretofore choice tales, sketches, essays, narratives, etc. from the English magazines, such as have given the Post a name for the excellence of its selections,

Engravings—In the way of engravings we present at least two weekly, one of an instructive and the other of a humorous character,

☞ Of course we shall maintain for the Post the character it has acquired of being a strictly moral paper, not ridiculously squeamish and straight laced, but really and truly moral; such as may be taken into the family circle without fear. Advertisements of an improper character shall be, as heretofore, rigorously excluded.

CHEAP POSTAGE.

The postage on the Post to any part of the United States, when paid quarterly in advance, is now only 26 cents a year. And we trust that the public generally will show their appreciation of this commendable reduction of postage, by largely increasing the number of papers taken at the various offices—that thus there may be no falling off in the revenue of the Post office department. This will insure a continuance of the present reduced rates.

TERMS.

The terms of the Post are Two Dollars if paid in advance, 3,00, if not paid in advance. For five dollars in advance, one copy will be sent three years. We continue the following low terms for Clubs—to be sent, in the city, to one address, and, in the country, to one Post Office:

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN
A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER,

Devoted to African Colonization and Civilization, to Literature and General Intelligence.

The undersigned propose to publish in the city of Washington a weekly newspaper, bearing the above title, and dedicated to a sound morality in politics, to the Union of the States, to the cause of African colonization and civilization, and to all topics of a high and general interest to their country and mankind. They will endeavor to impress upon the people and Governments of the United States and of the several States the importance of colonizing in Africa, with their own consent, the free people of color of this country, and such as may become free. They will communicate to the public all important information they may obtain in regard to the geography, exploration, resources, commerce, and population of Africa; the state of the slave trade, and the measures best adapted for its suppression; and will enforce the duty of union among all Christian denominations in efforts to diffuse the knowledge of our Saviour, and Christianity among the barbarous people of that continent.

They will aim to render the journal an instructive and useful Family Newspaper, and to secure for its columns, as the public favor shall enable them, contributions, literary and scientific, of decided merit.

The Christian Statesman will be of the size of the Home Journal or National Era, and exceed in size the Intelligencer or the Union of this city; and, with but few advertisements, will be nearly filled with matter designed to be of interest to its readers.

It will be printed with new type, on fine white paper, and in mechanical execution be equal to the best newspapers in the country.

Rahway Jan. 25 1847.

A year since I was taken with the influenza and my whole system left in a debilitated state. I was induced to try Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla.

After taking two or three bottles, I was very much relieved, and attributed it entirely to said Sarsaparilla. I have continued taking and improve every day. I believe it saved my life, and would not be without it under any consideration.

G. W. McLEAN.

Scrofula Cured.

This certificate conclusively proves that Sarsaparilla has perfect control over the most obstinate diseases of the blood. Three cures in one house is unprecedented.
